Wainwright Girl Wins Gov.-General's Medal

On Monday afternoon at the Wainwright school a very interesting ceremony took place, when the chairman of the School Board, Mr B. N. Fraser, in a few appropraite remarks made a presentation of the Governor-Generals school medal to Miss Mary E. Scoffield.

The medal which was forwarded through the provincial Dept of Education is a handsome trophy bearing busts of the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire on the obverse and on the reverse the words "Presented by the Governor-General of Canada" surrounding the duke's private coat-of-arms.

It was accompanied by the following letter:—

"Dear Miss Scoffield:

"I have the pleasure to enclose a bronze medal donated by His Excellency the Duke of Devonshire, Governor General of Canada and awarded to the candidate receiving the highest number of marks in the inspectorate of the public school leaving examinations for June, 1920.

(Sgd) Geo. K. Haverstock
Secretary"

This signal win reflects great credit upon miss Scoffield and also upon the teaching staff of our town school (where she has received practically all of her education) and The Star joins with the whole community in offering this particular pupil hearty congratulations and in wishing her a continuation of her educational success which she has proved by the bestowal of this honor.

U. F. A. PLAN BIG FALL DRIVE

The Central Political Committee the department about 30 cents six dollars from every farmer in the province, and to make every farmer and farm woman, farmer's son and farmer's daughter, a member of the U. F. A. and U. F. W. A. and political members in good standing, and to place our official organ in every farm home The plan is one dollar out of each six will go into a central organization fund, out of which all expenses of the drive will be paid. This drive is to be self-supporting. It is to be paid for entirely out of the proceeds of the drive, but it is planned that the local, District Political Association and Central will each receive one dollar net from the membership subscription.

This is the biggest united cooperative effort to enlist every farmer and farm woman in the farmer's movement that has ever been attempted. It should yield big returns. A similar drive put on in Manitoba for ten days last March yielded $49,507.85; while the Liberty Drive in Saskatchewan, put on in October 1919, and planned for one day only, yield $82,456.60. There is no question that results can be obtained in every constituency and with the efficient machinery of our district organizations, the prospects for such a drive are splendid. It ought to be easily possible to reach the objective of fifty thousands members for the U. F. A. for 1920.

"IT CAN'T— IT CAN BE DONE

There are thousands to tell you it cannot be done,
There are hundreds who prophesy failure,
There are thousands who point to you, one by one,
The danger which wait to assail you.
But you just buckle in, with a bit of agrin,
Use some good old horse sense, and go to it;
You surely will win—understand the whole thing
That "cannot be done, and you'll do it.

BAKING QUALITIES OF THE LOWER GRADES OF FLOUR

(Experimental Farm Notes)

With the ever increasing cost of living, it has become necessary to find corresponding means of saving. The house, who is the person on whom most of the responsibility of economizing rests. The use of some of the cheaper grades of flour instead of the highly expensive first patent is another means of saving that may be added to the already long list. During the war, all members of the community were forced to use government standard flour which was of a lower grade than most people had been accustomed to.

Nevertheless, most of the bakers succeeded in furnishing bread so good that few people would have considered it distinctly inferior had it not been for the difference in color. P. Russell Gowan, Dominion government cerealist, says that too much attention has been ever, always been paid to color in flour and bread. Bread that is really very pale is not so healthful as bread made of somewhat lower grade of flour and the war-time bread was really superior as a food to the extremely white product in use previously. Lower grades of flour somewhat similar to the government standard flour can always be purchased but are not usually in much demand on account of their inferior color. These second and third grade flours, however, contain a higher percentage of protein and assimilable phosphates. These features are distinctly advantageous.

While the lower grades of flour may require some slight modifications in the baking method in order to produce the best possible bread, these changes are not serious and, as ever, will be experienced in handling such flours, when we consider the lower price of the cheaper grades of flour and their high nutritive value, we see two distinct advantages in using them. The claims made for the whitest flours are nearly always much exaggerated and are something quite absurd and the public would do well to insist on obtaining the really superior materials which are sold as inferior.

RANCHERS & FARMERS LOSE HEAVILY EVERY YEAR: LACK OF BRANDS

Every issue of the Alberta Gazette contains a large number of advertisements of stray cattle and horses which carry brands that cannot be found in the brand book, remarked W. E. Stevens, secretary of the Stock Grower's Protective Association in commenting on the subject of losses arising through stockmen using unrecorded brands.

He started that a letter to the recorder of brands at Medicine Hat, in most cases, brought the reply that the brand was not recorded in Alberta. The only conclusion to be drawn was that someone was using a brand that was not recorded. Besides being unlawful this practice was the cause of an annual loss to farmers and ranchers of many thousands of dollars.

LETTERS to the EDITOR

WET OR DRY?

The Manse,
Wainwright, Alberta.

Sir:—

I have read with great interest the reasons given in the 'Star' on "Why I will vote Wet" and "Why I will vote Dry" The "Wet" reasons are amazing, the writer wonders for example what would have happened to RobertBurns and Byron under Prohibition.

Every true lover of Burns has asked the same question. In the literary history of Scotland there rises before us with the solemn agony not yet faded from his noble features, the figure of him,

"Who walked in glory and in joy
Following his plow upon the mountain side," and the great tragedy of it all is, that his great loving nature his wit, and his genius were not saved from the blighting effects of Alcohol. And Byron, surely this "Wet" writer is not serious! What did Byron say of himself? (I quote from memory)

"My days are like the yellow leaf
The worm, the canker, and the grief
Are mine alone."

If I may make a suggestion, it is this; gather all the reasons you can that are given out by the "Wets" and publish them and it will help the vote for Prohibition as nothing else will.

The only true reasons why men and women will vote 'Wet' are either ignorance, selfishness, or moral depravity.

You sir, have during the past month been pointing out the necessity of community work and the creation of a community spirit. Now here is community work of the greatest importance; and if I may make bold to offer another suggestion it is, that the 'Star' throws its influence on the side of Prohibition.

The issue is a vital one. Canada must be in the forefront of nations; her strength must not be impaired by alcohol: her boys and girls must grow up strong in mind and body, and the nation must be free from that which degrades and demoralizes.

Is it not Shakespeare himself who says by the mouth of the disgraced and ruined Cassio, "O thou invisible spirit of wine, if thou hast no name to be known by, let us call thee 'devil.'"

I had thought of taking the "Wet" points one by one, but space forbids, but I may say that if I had not better reasons than the eleven given, I would keep quiet for they only help the other side.

ALBERTA REJECTS THE CALIFORNIA LICENCE SYSTEM

The provincial secretary's department had seriously considered establishing the California system of number plates for automobiles in Alberta but eventually decided against it, largely on account of difficulty of enforcing the law in the province.

Under the California system the automobile owner has a permanent plate carving the state name abbreviation and the automobile number. Each year in a suitable slide, there are attached to this plate the date of the year, in smaller letters. This considerably reduces the original cost of the plate as the small letters for the year can be manufactured at a much smaller cost.

The objection, however, so far as Alberta is concerned is the small size of these year numbers. In the older states and provinces where enforcement of automobile laws has been in vogue for a long time, little or no trouble is experienced with car owners failing to take out their annual license promptly and put on the new number plates. They do it as a matter of habit, almost. On the other hand, this is one of the greatest difficulties in Alberta to get owners to pay attention to the necessity of getting out a new license each year.

Numerous letters are on file in the department from various parts of the province, informing on various owners who are running cars around the country five or six months after the first of each year with the previous year's number of the year in smaller letters, the department fears its tack of bringing these delinquents to justice would be made much more difficult as the smaller numbers are much more difficult to read and easier to deface.

So far as the cost of the number plates is concerned and department official said that this would make no difference to the individual owner, inasmuch no charge for the plate, supplying it free with the payment of the annual license charge for the car which is figured on the wheel base measurement of the automobile. The present plates themselves cost. mittee of the U. F. A. have now made definite plans for staging a membership drive to cover the whole province the first week in November. Manitoba and Saskatchewan have completed arrangements for a similar drive for exactly the same time. Therefore, this drive will extend throughout the three prairie provinces during the first week of November

The object throughout the drive in each province will be the same-to collect the sum of each; and this charge is absorbed by the department in the license fee charged the owner.

Wainwright A.C. Meet's New Feature

The second meeting of the W. A. C's third series brought out a big crowd on Friday night and, after the hard work put into improving the rink for the comfort of the spectators, the committee's efforts were well repaid. Prompt to time the Referee's whistle sounded and a fast clean game of basketball then began between the school teachers and the High School team. The play was excellent yet signs of nervousness could be noticed in the first period, this being caused by the hilarity of the crowd. On resumption the younger players simply were irresistible and to the great delight of the crowd and the teachers, the school girls won by eleven points to seven.

The teams lined up as follows:

Teachers—Miss Stanford and Miss Howard, Forward; Miss Maguire and Mrs Bremner, Defence; Miss Anderson and F. Tory, Centre.

Scholars:—M. Graham and E. Murray, Forward; H. Aykroyd and N. Kint, Defence; L. Fraser and M. Scoffield, Centre.

Boys under 12yrs—J. Alderman, G. Kenny, L. Mabey, P. Wilkins and A. Spence lined up and after a good hard race A. Spence made a hurricane finesh and won from P. Wilkins Boys 12 to 15 years:—F. Monahan small but gritty led F. McLean and E. Kinny for some distance then E. Kenny did not want to tread on the others so got in front and stayed there.

½ mile walk:—G. Hodgins, N. Priestley and Dr Wallace faced the starter. Wallace and Hodgins went off at top speed and Priestley followed keeping well within the rules of fair feet and toe work. Results Priestly won Hodgins and Wallace disqualified by judges.

Girls' Skipping race for 8 to 12 years:—This event was runin two heats R. McLeod, K. Clute, V. Graham finding the judge's eye. A. McLeod and M. Fish are to run again. The crowd enjoyed this event and the handsome prizes offered should bring out a large number of girl skippers.

220 yds scratch race:—A splendid race from start to finish. H. Harden was first off the mark leading G. Cross and J. Channell two thirds of the distance when Cross challenged and won Channell beating Harden for second place by a narrow margin.

Wainwright Ladies Basketball club turned out to play the School Red Team and the large crowd were entertained all the time with smart play. This was the initial game for the W. L. B. C. and it took them all their time to hold the score level at half time 3 all. The second period was much better and fewer mistakes made. The younger players tired a little and the W. L. B. t am finished ahead by 8 points to 7 a fine game and we all want to see both teams play again. The The teams lined up as follows: W. L. B. C.:—Mrs Johnson and M. Rubison, Forwards; R. Love and S. Kenny, Defence; L. Kenny and A. Cofield, Centre.

School Reds: M. Howes and P. Wakefield, Forwards; M. Kohl and V. Lake, Defence; M. Mabey and M. Avkroyd Centre.

Putting the shot:—R. Aykroyd led the field with a fine put and with Dr Wallace qualified for the finals.

440 yds race:—This was a hard race and the pace being too hot for the first two laps tired the runners so that the finished in very slow time. J Channell leading H. Harden and G. Cross in the order named.

½ mile Handicap race:—A Lackie scratch, A. Gandiche 4 yds and N. Priestley 50 yds. got away to a good start. Priestley running at a good clip set the pace. The scratch man gave a good exhibition of running and gained 20 yds but eased up on the home stretch following Priestley the winner to the tape. Gandiche retired as the muscle of his leg were giving him trouble. The time was good for this fine race brought a splendid program to a finish.

Next Friday evening the program is the best yet and it is well practiced Edgerton Girl Basket Ball team will play the High School Greens; the W. L. B. C. versus school teachers and the Boys Basket Ball team will play also. Get there on time the house will be full. The biggest and best exhibition of pure amateur sports.

The Personal Side

PROMINENT WESTERN CHARACTERS—SOME INTERESTING ANECDOTES OF PEOPLE WE ALL KNOW

ALEXANDER GADDIE

There was a notable half breed who used to live at Crooked Lakes named Alexander Gaddie. He was of sturdy Orkney stock on his father's side which furnished so many good men to the service of the Hudson's Bay Company, and when he talked English he had a pronounced Kirkwell accent. On the maternal side he was of Indian blood, native to the region. Although an exceedingly intelligent man his sympathies were always with the people of his mother's race and he took treaty at Crooked Lakes as an Indian. He had an allotment on the reserve and was one of the first of the Indians to achieve success in farming. He had been a notable buffalo hunter and Indian fighter in the early days, and had earned a reputation for coolness and courage in some of the battles which the Metis hunters fought with the Sioux. One of his daughters, an exceedingly attractive girl, married a white man and the writer was present at the wedding feast which took place at Gaddie's house on the reserve. It was a strange gathering that sat down at the table. Colonel MacDonald, a veteran of the Wolseley campaign, and who was later Indian agent for Treaty No. 4, was the guest of honor, and several members of his family. The other Indian Department officials of the Agency were also present, and there were several other white people. Interspersed with these were all the Indian notables. Kahlikeewistahaw, the old chief of the Crooked Lake Indians, who was one of the signers of the Qu'Appelle Treaty, although eighty years of age was a splendid figure of a man, and notable amongst the guests. Neepahpeness who has been called by some of those best qualified to judge Indian conditions, as the finest Indian of them all, comported himself with quiet dignity and there were a number of prominent Indians from the nearby reserves. The health of the bride was proposed by Colonel MacDonald, and there were a number of speeches in English. At last Gaddie got to his feet and said in perfect English:

"I want to thank the Colonel and the white men who have spoken, for their kind words and I wish them not to take offence if I now talk to my own people." He then made an eloquent speech in Cree, in which he urged upon his Indian half brothers to accept the wisdom of the white man and to follow along his trail.

Gaddie had a son called "Jimmy" who was inclined to be rather wild. He got into bad company and started out with another half breed named Racette on a horse stealing expedition. They stole some horses from a rancher in the Qu'Appelle Valley named McLeish, and McLeish, with a mounted policeman, rode hard on their trail. The pursuers came upon the half breeds carousing in a shack and McLeish, followed by the policeman, attempted to force an entrance. A fight occurred, a gun was fired and McLeish fell mortally wounded, while the mounted policeman was badly handled. Gaddie and Racette fled to the broken land near the Qu'Appelle Valley on the Crooked Lakes and for a long time successfully evaded capture. They were eventually taken, however, and after a trial at Regina were sentenced to death.

If old Gaddie was exercised over this affair he showed no signs of perturbation. He went calmly about his daily vocations. One day Colonel MacDonald, on receipt of news from Regina, drove over to Gaddie's place and found him busy about the house. He said, "Gaddie, I am the messenger of bad news. Your boy Jimmy is to be hanged in Regina in a few days."

"Too bad, Colonel," said Gaddie, "but Jimmy was always a bad boy; will you come out and look at my wheat?" Nevertheless the old man was at the foot of the scaffold to receive the body of his executed son.

Alexander Gaddie has not been long dead. He was a typical plainsman of the old breed. Honest, intelligent and reliable; brave as a lion in the face of danger and full of patriotic sentiment for his own country and his own people, he was a good example of the race of the old time plainsman, most of whom have now passed away.

A CHIEF AMONGST THESE PEOPLE

There was a splendid Saulteaux Indian of the Crooked Lakes Agency who bore the name of O'Soup. He was a tall, stalwart, swarthy man and he carried himself like an Indian King. He was, I think, one of the most dignified men in the world, and his eye beamed with intelligence and energy. He was a great hunter and never settled down to farming pursuits so much encouraged by the Indian Department. Even after the advent of the railways he would make long hunting excursions to the remotest part of the country, seeming to delight in life in the wilderness.

Sir Richard Lake, the present Lieut. Governor of the province of Saskatchewan, relates an incident, slight in itself, but very significant in connection with this man.

The two half breed murderers, Gaddie and Racette, had been arrested charged with the murder of the Qu'Appelle Valley rancher, named McLeish. Sir Richard was then a young man and had just received his commission as Justice of the Peace. He was one of the magistrates before whom the accused were brought. He relates how O'Soup was called to the witness stand and asked through an interpreter if he was a leader among the Indians. The court room was crowded with interested Indian spectators; and O'Soup drew himself up, and with a gesture of indescribable dignity towards the Indians, said, "Yes, I am a chief amongst these people."

He had, however, one fault, he was rather addicted to the "fire water" of the white man and on one occasion, not so many years ago, allowed it to get so much the better of him that he lay out in very cold weather, with the result that he lost the use of one of his legs, which, if the writer is not mistaken, had to be amputated. He was at that time living some place near Fort Qu'Appelle and he wished to return to his home in Crooked Lakes. The Indian Agent did not think it well for him, in his feeble condition, to take the journey, and permission was refused. He went into the bush and with his axe, constructed a rude crutch and started to hobble home. He was, however, followed and brought back. He died not so many years ago. He was one of the Indians from the west who was present at the consecration of the late Archbishop Langevin at St. Boniface and he made a speech there in his own tongue that those familiar with the Cree language declared was a masterpiece of studied eloquence.

HOW RIEL NEARLY ESCAPED THE GALLOWS

It is now pretty well known that the late Sir John Macdonald was very reluctant to have Louis Riel hanged. There was, of course, a strong feeling against the rebel leader in the west. He had been guilty of treason and making war against the government of Canada; but the Metis themselves, although vigorous and enterprising fighters, had carried on the war with a fairly decent regard to the amenities. Indeed on many occasions they had intervened to curb the barbarities of their Indian allies. Of course Riel's great offence was in having evoked the aid of the Indians, and thus exposing the country to the horrors of an Indian uprising. There was no doubt that the halfbreeds had many real grievances and that Ottawa had long turned a deaf ear to them. Quebec was aroused in their favor, and Laurier, in the House of Commons, had made a passionate and eloquent plea in their behalf.

Sir John was naturally inclined to clemency but the opposition practically dared him to hang Riel.

As the time for the execution approached, a plan was evolved to enable Riel to escape, which was said to have been connived at by the authorities.

There was a well known French-Canadian named Pascal Bonneau living in Regina at the time. He was a strong political supporter of the government, and he had little sympathy with the rebellion. He knew Riel well, however, and had some sympathy with his miserable condition.

It was arranged that a few days before the date set for the execution he was to establish relays of fast horses every ten miles between Regina and the American boundary; arrangements were to be made to get Riel out of the Regina police barracks; and given half an hours start not all the police in the country could catch him before he reached United States, where as a political offender he would be safe.

All arrangements were made, but the plan was disclosed by a relative of the unfortunate rebel leader, who was himself in some danger for his share in the rebellion, and who doubtless sought to obtain favor from the authorities. So Riel went to his ignominious death.

After the execution the body was taken to the Roman Catholic church, which at that time was situated on the present site of the Credit Foncier Building.

It was prepared for burial by Mr. Bonneau, and W. G. Pettingell, still a well known business man of the provincial capital. Mr. Pettingell told the writer a few days ago that after the work was done and the body interred in a shallow grave beneath the floor of the church, he and Mr. Bonneau adjourned to the Palmer House bar to seek a little spirituous stimulent. As Mr. Bonneau drained his glass he said, "I wish I were as sure of salvation as he is now."

Riel's remains rested in the church for several days under the constant guardianship of Mr. Bonneau's son. At last one snowy night he received word to remove it to a box car that was to be left on the siding east of Broad Street. Care had to be exercised because local feeling was much inflamed against the dead man and there was reason to anticipate a demonstration.

Young Bonneau waited until it was quite dark, then he dug up Riel's body and taking it on his back, plodded out in the snow through what is now Victoria Park, and going by the outskirts of the town, reached the box car, where he laid the earthly remains of that restless spirit upon some straw. When the express came along it picked up the car. The young man maintained his vigil all the way to Winnipeg.

The last resting-place of Louis Riel is in the cemetery of the Cathedral at St. Boniface, on the banks of the Red River, and is marked by a stone monument upon which is engraven the simple inscription "Riel."

Working Through College

Educating a girl at one of the big colleges for women used to mean a long drain on the family treasury. In some cases it has meant so many deprivations for father and mother, little brothers and sisters, or less talented and ambitious members of the family that some girls have given up the hope of going to college. This need not be. A girl can now work her way through college without losing any of the prestige or fun that she would enjoy if she had the backing of a big bank account. In fact, since the war made work fashionable, working one's way through college is regarded as a clever achievement rather than a hardship, and scores of girls are doing it.

The typewriting machine is a good friend to many ambitious girls. There is always plenty of copying to be done around a college. It is said that about five per cent. of the girls attending colleges aspire to woo the Muses. Typing their verses and stories in addition to their less artistic efforts provides much work for the girl who has a typewriter and can operate it. The faculty of a college too will often supply a girl, who is working her way through, with a considerable amount of this kind of work. Small business concerns that have not a sufficient amount of work to employ a regular stenographer are glad to avail themselves of the services of an occasional typist.

Help is hard to get in college kitchens as in the kitchens at homes, and the girl who can and will adapt herself to this kind of work, will have little difficulty to find opportunities. To girls studying dietetics and certain branches of chemistry this work may be specially helpful.

Waiting on table in the college has long been recognized as a legitimate and effective means of supplying a girl with physical food while she feeds her mind. Any amount of outside work in this line is readily available. Tea rooms, restaurants and cafeterias offer a growing field which ambitious girls are taking advantage of. Summer hotels in Muskoka and similar districts provide work for numerous college girls during the holiday season.

The Movies Help

One girl who aspires to be a doctor sells tickets in a moving picture theatre every evening and holidays. Not a few find employment as pianists.

Making and selling "Divinity Fudge," and home-made chocolates sweetened the climb of Parnassus for one college girl. She had a big trade right among her school friends. Girls are never so highbrow that they do not crave candy or so hard up that they will not spend money on it.

This girl extended her sales out into the families of her fellow students, and also supplied a popular tea room with a special brand of chocolate creams. Her mother's kitchen was her "studio" and she had custom enough to keep her busy during all her spare time.

A girl who roomed outside the college she attended gave a chafing-dish supper to her colleagues and their friends last winter, and thereby derived quite a nice little income. She distributed neat cards announcing the fact that "Stews for Students" was her specialty. Her chafing-dish suppers became quite popular.

A farmer's daughter who is studying law pays her college expenses by conducting a private agency for butter, eggs, chickens, and all kinds of farm produce. Mushroom culture is a hobby that works in with her other business ventures. Through this enterprising young woman many of her fellow students obtain employment, and not a little fun, picking fruit during the school holidays.

Profitable Businesses

Manicuring, boot-blacking—and whitening—hat varnishing, and hair dressing are all made profitable businesses by girl students. One girl makes a special study of individual styles in hair dressing, guaranteeing to suit the coiffure to the particular type of beauty represented by her customers. This girl adds to her art of hair dressing the manufacture of a hair tonic, and a preparation, the use of which, insures a more or less, permanent wave to the tresses. This preparation is specially popular among the girls for whom straight hair is by the edict of the hair artist taboo, as the "permanent wave" does away with perpetual waving.

Three girls went into partnership making ladies' blouses and fine underwear in order to make their way through college. Their business grew to such an extent that they found it advisable to open a little shop. They now employ two other women, and have added to their venture the making of children's clothing, specializing on infants' outfits.

Coaching the slow-coaches is always a source of revenue to a clever college girl and may be undertaken in addition to any of the many other ways of earning money.

Apparently "age cannot wither" the ambition of some women. A woman who had always longed for an education, found herself at the age of forty, without ties, means, or any special talent that she knew of except a knack of making fancy desserts. She obtained work in this line in a high class restaurant and is thus earning money enough to pay her way through college. She aims to be a teacher of Domestic Science.

Of course this way of getting through college means hard work, but college professors say that girls who work their way through college are, as a rule, more in earnest than are the girls who play their way through college.

The Lesser Evil

He was one of those fellows who thought he could do anything, an opinion shared by some of his friends.

I can't decide whether to go in for painting or poetry," he remarked one evening to the young lady he bored with his vain chatter.

"I'd go in for painting if I were you," replied the girl.

"Then you've seen some of my paintings?"

"Oh, no!" she told him cruelly. But I've heard some of your poetry!"

"My Sweetheart's the Man in the Moon"

Drawn By NELL BRINKLEY

. . . and we're going to be married quite soon." The girl with a dream sweetheart—and no real one must have hummed it that way—but the girl who has a live one to paddle alongside of, turns the funny old song around the other way and sings in the moonshine, "The Man in the Moon is My Sweetheart"—for his face is just about everywhere—and most particularly in that lovely orb of silver, that lovely bubble of romance that floats up and up, out of dark trees, into the sky-sea—to look down into the windows and the hearts of the people who love and are beloved.

The moon spreads magic—and the commonplace, everyday face of the man a girl loves is then fitly held there, for the face that stirs on one else in the world, spreads magic, too, and conjures dreams for the girl who turns up her eyes to his face and the moon's.

"Oh, silver, brooding moon, the 'man's' face in your circle is my lover's, mirrored bright on your polished shield, to glimmer and smile down at me, the long ray of your moon-beams that strikes jewels through my window pane is his reaching hand—adoring—saying, 'Love? . . . and I laugh and say, 'HERE!'"

ETERNAL YOUTH

There is nothing we lose with such regret as youth. We are told that it is natural to grow old and perhaps it is, but you see the vital man or woman of middle age, fight so hard at the prospect of surrendering the things of their prime. It is one of the tragedies of life that we must grow old and lose our mental and physical powers, with the inevitable prospect before us of going down to the grave when our tale of years is told.

Ever since the days of mythology humanity has been looking for a fountain of youth, something that would preserve us with all the hopes, with all the illusions and with all the strength of early manhood and womanhood.

In the ancient days of Greece, perpetual youth was supposed to be an attribute of the Gods; the centuries did not put a single wrinkle in the matchless face of Venus, nor did Cupid ever grow up. Ponce de Leon, one of the Spanish explorers believed that he had found the fountain of youth in Florida; historians, however, had very little sympathy for the pathos of his quest and have laughed at him ever since. Almost everyone wants to retain their youth; but age, decay and disillusion have seemed so inevitable that humanity has, in the past accepted its destiny as inevitable. Then, of course, we have the Scriptural dictum that our years shall be "three score and ten, and perhaps by reason of strength four score;" and we must admit that it has been pretty generally correct.

It will, therefore, come with a great surprise, perhaps with something of a shock, that science has recently made discoveries that show conclusively that there are means of arresting the wheels of age and that the day may be at hand when a man of eighty may be as full of vigor and strength as he was at forty.

Away back, about 1890, a French doctor named Brown Sequard declared that he had discovered the elixir of life. He had been a physiologist of the nervous system at Harvard university. After conducting many researches he injected into his body a serum made from the secretions of certain animals. The results were so remarkable that the attention of the scientific world was attracted. Brown Sequard was, at that time, seventy-two years of age, and the result of his experiments was that he took on the semblance of a man in the early forties.

A close investigation was made of the serum and medical men, always inclined to be somewhat conservative, discredited it. The Harvard professor died in Paris at the age of seventy-seven years and his elixir was regarded as a joke.

Nevertheless, of recent years, scientists have come to the conclusion that he opened up a remarkable scientific truth.

A careful research has been conducted and science has come to the conclusion that with proper care there is no reason whatsoever that a human being's life may not be prolonged in its full vigor until considerably over one hundred years.

Some time in 1910, Dr. Carrol, a scientist of unquestioned reputation and conducting researches under the auspices of the Rockefeller Institute, took the fragment of the heart of a chicken which, in the natural course of events had not yet broken the egg shell and by means of injecting into it the serum taken from the living animals, has succeeded in keeping it alive until the present day. Among other experiments which have been conducted, this is probably the most noteworthy one, and scientific medical men are rapidly coming to the conclusion that senility and death can certainly be arrested and may, perhaps be preventable occurrences.

A French physician named Doctor Varonoff, who was in charge of a French hospital during the war, had great experience in transplanting bones, tissues and organs from bodies newly dead, or living, into other living bodies. He carried on, at the same time, experiments with animals. The results he achieved were astonishing.

He took glands from young animals and placed them in old decrepit animals, practically dying of old age. The result was that in a few months these senile objects bloomed forth in health, strength and youth. He took the glands out again and the animals at once became old.

The same results have been produced with human beings who have become young when the glands from apes have been planted in their bodies.

There are, of course, many exaggerations in connection with such a subject, but nevertheless there is enough data in some of the medical scientific magazines to justify certain of their claims, and there is not the least doubt in the world that in view of these modern discoveries, old age can be considerably postponed.

For a number of years certain ailments and decays which usually come from old age, have been known to be cured, or at least ameliorated by the use of secretions from the glands of apes.

There is one notable instance of this in the person of a very prominent man who, for many years, was a notable figure in the province of Saskatchewan; but these remedies have been practised almost entirely by some French physicians and the public have not been quite aware of their significance.

There is no question but that these discoveries must be taken seriously and it is a matter that will affect almost everybody.

Science has destroyed the ravages of enteric, typhus, yellow fever and diphtheria and if the investigators have again managed to discover a great physiological truth, it may have a most wonderful effect on humanity. It is, in any case, a most interesting subject.

BRITISH CANADA

Speaking at Calgary not very long ago, at a banquet in honor of the Imperial press delegates, R. B. Bennett, K.C., made an eloquent and vigorous speech, in which he said that one of the first duties of the citizen of this western country was an allegiance to British institutions and the inculcation of a British sentiment. He made some statements in his speech—and we have no reason to doubt them because Mr. Bennett is accurate in his pronouncements—that in the province of Alberta there had been some anti-British feeling—and that too in quarters where it might be least expected.

In his peroration he said, "We found this country British and British we will leave it."

Every good citizen in Canada will applaud these sentiments. We owe everything to our British heritage—our freedom, our progress, our laws and our forms of government, and our very privileges to agitate for our rights. French Canada obtained from Great Britain a charter of liberties which in its scope, provided for a far greater measure of freedom than ever could have been obtained under the sovereignty of the country of their origin. We have had agitations and, of course, some things that have seemed unjust during the evolution stage, but through it all has run the thread of British justice and freedom, and we propose to maintain it in our country.

THE MENACE

There si no doubt whatsoever that the explosion which occurred in Wall Street, New York, a few days ago, resulting in the loss of many lives, was caused by some mad revolutionaries who attempted to gratify their envious spite by attempting to wreck some of the financial institutions of New York.

Some high explosive, probably a bomb, was set just about the noon hour, in front of the Morgan banking place at the corner of Wall and Broad Streets. This is the very centre of the financial district; the great American banking concerns are grouped all around and the sub-treasury, with its fine statue of Washington, is just across the street. The streets in this portion of New York are narrow canyons, hemmed in by sky-scraping office buildings and at the noon hour, when the multitude of employees pour out, it si one setehing mass of humanity. No place could have been better selected for an outrage that would take a heavy toll of innocent human life.

This affair ought to bring home to those of us who are inclined to make light of Bolshevist activities on this side of the water, the menace which exists. There is no doubt that that large sums of money have been expended, both in the United States and Canada, to spread the pernicious doctrine of Bolshevism. There are always hare-brained enthusiasts who will take up propaganda of this nature and to their ranks are attracted all kinds of cranks, many of whom have homicidal manias. Unscrupulous leaders of the organizatons find these people willing tools; no enterprise is too mad; no outrage too cruel for them. These are the irresponsible individuals whose weakness is taken advantage of by propagandists who sit in safety and handle the funds, encouraging their poor dupes to perform the most wanton outrages, and sometimes see them pay the penalty of their crimes, without compunction.

There are some people in a quashy public position, such as ministers, seeking notriety and others who affect to see in Bolshevism some merit. This Wall Street outrage ought to bring these people to their senses. In Canada and the United States there is unquestionably some injustice in our financial social systems, but the country is big and wide and offers rewards for the expenditure of thrift, energy and enterprise to the meanest citizen. If a man cannot survive and make an adequate living for his family in the United States or Canada, there is something fundamentally wrong. We have no history of age-long repression and tyranny such as guided some of the peoples in Europe to revolt, and we want no Bolshevist or anarchistic movements. It is the duty of every good citizen to do his best to nip these pernicious doctrines in the bud.

CROP ESTIMATES

The Winnipeg Free Press has been in the habit of making crop estimates which have been pretty approximately correct. They have agricultural experts who are in the field most of the summer and are, therefore, in a position to judge. A few days ago the Free Press announced its estimate of the season's crop of the three prairie provinces as follows:

Wheat, two hundred and forty-eight million, seven hundred and forty-five thousand bushels.

Oats, three hundred and fifty-two million, one hundred and nine thousand bushels.

Barley, forty-seven million, five hundred and sixty-four thousand bushels.

Flax, seven million, one hundred and fifty-two thousand bushels.

Rye, eight million, nine hundred and twelve thousand bushels.

Taking it by and large, this means a tremendous lot of money for Western Canada as a result of the season's agricultural activities. This year has been by no means a favorable one, and crops are more or less patchy, yet even under these conditions the above figures indicate something of the wealth that lies in our soil. It is within the memory of many of us, who are not yet old, that the agricultural capacities of the west have been seriously questioned. The above figures, however, tell an eloquent tale of the progress of development and determination.

minutes, the Bishop, who was in the chair, interrupted with the question:

FAIRYLAND

Know ye the road to Fairyland?—
"Tis far and far away;
Beyond the Gulf of Time it lies,
Distant and dim its hills arise;
Our childish hearts and childish eyes
Knew where its valleys lay.

Know ye the woods of Fairyland
That was so dread to see?
Deep in their shades great dragons roam,
And many an ogre has his home,
And in their caverns dwarf and gnome
Hold fearsome revelry.

Know ye the towers of Fairyland
That rise so white and fair?
Like frozen foam their turrets seem,
And in their halls, where jewels gleam,
The Fairy Princess lies adream
Amid her golden hair.

CLEANLINESS IS HEALTH

By the use of Gillett's Lye, house cleaning is made a pleasure instead of a drudgery. It softens the water and cleans thoroughly whether the dirt is visible or invisible. Destroys all bacteria and infectious germs, removes obstructions from drain pipes, closets, sinks, etc. Refrigerators are made delightfully fresh and clean by using one teaspoonful of Gillett's Lye dissolved in two gallons of water.

Beat the High Cost of Living by your Needle

One Way to Beat the H.C.L.

If you want to beat the high cost of living, buy a good paper pattern, get busy with your needle, and surprise yourself by making lovely things on almost nothing compared with the prices charged in the big stores. I use Home Journal patterns, because they are unusual and have a certain distinction of their own. Start with something simple, like a camisole, an envelope chemise or an apron. Work up gradually to more elaborate things. A dummy, or dress form, is a wonderful help in fitting.

Always buy good material. You will find it easier to work on, and all the skilled work in the world won't make cheap material look anything but shoddy. Two yards of good lace will give a frock or waist an air that a bolt of cheap lace can never give.

I found that the best way to work on Georgette, chiffon or net is to stitch the material on the machine through two thicknesses of paper. The top of a newspaper—the white part—is good for this purpose.

When making a coat, always have a tailor stitch the lapels and press it. You will find this greatly improves the appearance.

Learn to embroider, bead and braid. Draw your pattern on tissue paper and baste to the material, then work through the paper and tear it away when finished. The right look is often achieved by a little embroidery in self color on asuit or frock, or by two or three bound buttonholes, or perhaps a tailored pocket. I copied a sixteen dollar envelope chemise of pink crepe de chine a few weeks ago, but because I was able to embroider the little French flowers in lavender, blue and pink. Hemstitching adds greatly to the appearance of a thin waist, as around the armholes and around the cuffs.

Don't Discard Your Old Clothes

A few years ago I learned to crochet baby Irish lace. This can be used over and over again, for all kinds of collars and trimming. Right here I would like to say a few words to those poor, misguided elderly women who insist on wearing collarless blouses when their necks are perhaps not all that they should be. If they only knew how much they could improve their appearance by wearing a boned collar of net or lace, or even a velvet band, they would never go without a collar.

I have discovered that it is well not to discard anything unless it it is so much worn as to be absolutely useless. I recently made a suit which had been much admired. It is of blue broadcloth, with moderately tight skirt and three-quarter length coat. I found that I had an old black fox pillow muff, much worn in spots; but I cut out the best of it and made a collar and wide cuffs. Then I bought enough black fox banding to go around the bottom of the coat. I am sure that a suit like it would bring a hundred dollars in one of the big shops, but it cost me only thirty-five dollars.

This fact reminds me that if you know how to cut fur you can make over your old neckpieces. The fur should first be ripped. Then lay your pattern on the wrong side of the fur, and with a sharp-pointed scissors carefully cut the skin. Turn it over and see whether there are any worn places to be taken out. If so, indicate these with pins so that they can be cut out. The worn pieces that are cut out can be used as patterns for cutting the good pieces to be inserted. Sew the skin with an over and over stitch. Don't be afraid of putting in tiny pieces because the piecing doesn't show after it is finished.

Plan Your Wardrobe Ahead

I plan my wardrobe a year in advance. The stores have "clearance sales," usually in midsummer and at the beginning of the year. Things can then be bought at one-third of the regular prices. Many people say: "How do you know what you will want so far ahead?" I do not buy unless I am sure that I can use it. Certain conservative things are always good.

A short time ago I bought some lovely fine, silver lace at a ridiculously low price, because I knew I would soon need a new evening dress. At the time, I did not know exactly how I would use it. I began looking around at evening dresses, and not long after I saw in a "French" room, a lovely model of satin with a Georgette overdress with my same lace applied with a few stitches of handwork. The price was one hundred and seventy-five dollars. It will cost me about twenty-five dollars to copy. By the way, to preserve silver lace from tarnishing, I learned from a lace buyer, keep it rolled in black tissue paper away from the light. And you can make lovely negligees out of your old evening gowns by adding a little Georgette for trimming, flowing sleeves perhaps, and ribbons in contrasting colors for a girdle.

Some Helpful Suggestions

My clothes are always remodeled at least once, and sometimes oftener. However, I seldom do so immediately after discarding them, because they are too easily recognized and also because I am tired of them myself. When a dress is undesirable, I carefully brush it and remove all spots, then rip it, and save the best parts of it, also anything in the way of trimmings, findings, etc. I have a box for woolens, one for silk, a place for laces, findings, trimmings, ribbons, etc., also one for millinery things. The result is that when I get ready to make anything over, or make something new, I have an assortment easy to find, and usually find the thing I want.

I suggest that you keep a note book and pencil in your bag, so that you can jot down the details of a gown or waist that strikes your fancy. Do not forget the details, for a frock is often "made" by certain color combinations, a few buttons in the right place, a frill of fine lace, and so on.

Of course, if you can afford to wear "original" or "exclusive" models, it would be foolish to make your own clothes. But if you cannot, don't buy inferior clothing when you can dress well and save money by persevering and sewing for yourself. Don't be discouraged if it comes slowly. Follow up your first attempt by another, and still another, while you are in the mood, and sewing will soon become a pleasure instead of a bugbear.

THE PRICE OF SUCCESS

From an unknown author comes the all important question to every seeker of Success:

You want success. Are you willing to pay the price for it?

How much discouragement can you stand?

How much bruising can you take?

How long can you hang on in the face of obstacles?

Have you the grit to try to do what others have failed to do?

Have you the nerve to attempt things that the average man would never dream of tackling?

Have you the persistence to keep on trying after repeated failures?

Can you cut out luxuries? Can you do without things that others consider necessities?

Can you go up against skepticism, ridicule, friendly advice to quit, without flinching?

Can you keep your mind steadily on the single object you are pursuing, resisting all temptations to divide your attention?

Have you the patience to plan all the work you attempt; the energy to wade through masses of detail; the accuracy to overlook no point, however small, in planning or executing?

Are you strong to finish as well as quick to start?

Success is sold in the open market. You can buy it. I can buy it. Any man can buy it who is willing to pay the price.

CANADIAN PICTURES OF THE WAR

A diligent little man in Piccadilly summer clothes and with an unmistakable art gleam in his spectacles is again to be seen and heard in Canada wherever artists get together. P. C. Konody was here last year. Wherever you see Konody expect a migration of war pctures. Last year at the Canadian National, Konody topped the lot in attendance records. Almost as many people paid to see the Canadian war pictures as heard the Grenadier Guards for nothing. Along comes Mr. Konody again, this time with a still vaster acreage of Canadian war canvasses all en route to their final interment in the Ottawa mausoleum. We believe that a second instalment smuggled itself over here since the armistice and is now in Ottawa. The third lot, consisting of two hundred works, is the last—for which te deum laudamus! There must be at least one thousand records of Canada's part in the war. From the printed samples or Lot No. 3 we judge that they are on the whole better than Lot No. 1. No doubt thousands upon thousands of people will again crowd to see this exhibition of Martian realism and patriotic glory. But we are willing to believe that very few of Canada's army will care to see them. The terrible glory of modern war in all its super-realistic savagery is, we should like to believe, waining in popularity. No artists ever painted in any style and medium yet invented who could express Canada's part in the war. Nearing the second anniversary of the Armistice as we are, and viewing the social and economic wreckage of the world which peace has scarcely begun to rehabilitate, it would be far more compatible with the emotions of the great majority of people if we could have—instead of these painted records of horrifying war, some more human records of what has been done since November 11th, 1918, to bring humanity back to the world.

Remit by Dominion Express Money Order. If lost or stolen, you get your money back.

Useful Writing Table

Useful articles are like useful people—they're always admired. And so it is with this little writing table, so convenient to milady, which was contrived by a most ingenious mind. The little inventor didn't have much money, but did have brains which developed this adorable little writing desk out of a small kitchen table. And she uses it in her bedroom where it best suits her convenience, with a drawer to hold her private letters and where she can write at her own free will. This is how she worked the wonder.

She bought an ordinary kitchen table, measuring 3 feet by 18 inches, with a drawer in front, at a cost of $5. It was on good plain lines and had straight legs—an admirable asset. A carpenter made her little brackets as supports, one for each side of the table. These she fixed on herself with small hinges and screws. She puts them up when she is doing writing that requires extra space for papers and down when not in use, to save space.

The rest of her room was furnished in oak, so she stained the table to match and then was polished it. The china handles on the drawer she replaced with others of metal in a good old design, and partitioned the drawer itself with little sections of wood so that the papers in t could be kept in order.

An ugly light wood stationery box in her possession was then covered with pretty cretonne in a dark color, with a flap arranged at the back to keep the dust from the note paper. It was edged with a tiny gold band of braid. She then covered an old blotter with the same patterned cretonne, with the result that she, who couldn't afford to buy such a bit of luxury in the stores, now possesses an even better article through very little effort.

WHY BUY AT HOME?

Why buy at home when you might get more for your money elsewhere. This is sometimes remarked by those who shop away from home or send to mail order houses for goods sold by local dealers. "You might get more for your money elsewhere," since the element of chance enters why not see what you are getting beforehand by buying at home. There is a trade slogan "If satisfied, tell others, if not satisfied, tell us." You may have noticed how this works out. If a mail order biker strikes a real bargain, the news is generally well spread about the neighborhood but if stung they suffer in silence. On the other hand if a local purchase turns out unsatisfactory frequently everyone is told about it while the many satisfactory deals are taken as a matter of course. It is but human nature in action. This seems unfair to home merchants but upon analysis only goes to show that for general all round satisfaction in trading is trading there is no place like home.

Granted that a saving could be made by an occasional purchase away from home, to follow it up is a short sighted policy which lessens the circulation of money at home and eventually reacts upon the district in general and upon the purchaser as well. If people but considered the matter from this aspect there would be many less needless purchases made away from home. This district has not yet reached the place where it can afford to send away money to help up-build Winnipeg or Regina and increase values of farms about those cities. Let us keep our monty in circulation at home and see enhance values in the district about us.

Our merchants and dealers merit the trade of the towns people and farmers. Let us extend it to them whole heartedly and profit ourselves by so doing.

Yes, We can profit by it in spite of the fact that knockers may say that prices here are high. High prices everywhere are causing considerable unrest and it is reassuring to have people of the district who have travelled this summer north, west south or east, say upon their return that they had their eyes opened as to high prices prevailing elsewhere.

Keep your money circulating in your own home district.

THE NAVY LEAGUE CAMPAIGN.

October 21st is Trafelgar Day, and that famous and memorable anniversary will mark the climax of a campaign through out Canada to be carried on under the auspices of the Navy League. The direct object of the campaign will be to secure the needed funds to finance and carry on a permanent educational policy in Canada, for the avowed purpose of fostering the sea instinct in Canada, educating our youth to the traditions of the British Navy, and of impressing upon the public of Canada the important part our commerce on the seas plays in the national life of the country and the Empire.

All through Canada a revival of interest in the work of this organization has been manifested through the instigation of those comparitively few whose zealous enthusiasm for the objects of the League has never slackened, and this Campaign will mark the definite start of a policy that has been recognised since the war as essential to the wellbeing of the Dominion namely, a constant effort of interest and education which will keep alive in the hearts of the Canadian people, and particularly the young, that interest in and responsibility for the high ways of the seas which mean so much to Canada's daily commercial life, her national security, and the saftey of the Empire.

History has already watched Canada retrogade in seventy years from the position of third to eight maritime country, and ever thinking Canadian realises that in the flame rekindled with the thunderbolt of war should never again be allowed to die down. It is understood now, as never before, that only by the lanes of the sea is Canada linked to the Empire; the products of her fields, her mines and her factories to the markets of the world. The feats of those fleets that carried Canada's sons forth and back, that transported Canada's munitions and Canada's food when the issue depended in agony upon them; and which carried them in the face of an appealing danger not even yet fully guagd,—they have created a tradition that Canadians should reverse, and as a nation, continue to uphold.

The Campaign of the Navy League in Canada should need no further call than the quotation of the motto of their emblem. "Keep Watch!"

Make Your Tires Last Till Spring

NOW that the motoring season is about at an end, your greatest dread is the purchase of expensive tires.

For the best tires will deteriorate during the winter months, though little used.

Surely then you will be interested in learning how nearly a million motorists are avoiding this expenditure.

5,000 to 15,000 miles can be added to the tires now on your car, provided the fabric is still serviceable.

A new principle of construction which incorporates your worn casing in a brand new factory built tire makes this possible.

And at the very beginning you save half what you would pay for new tires—and get a puncture proof guarantee in addition.

Drop in today for further facts.

Storage Battery Talks

BY A. DUPRE

TO CAR OWNERS

Car Owners Dealing with The Service Station

A prompt and satisfactory service from any service station depends a good deal on the car owner himself. Truly enough, a good battery man will always find the trouble in a battery, but it often takes time, and time is worth money. Consequently, you are the loser by paying out money that you would not have to pay if you helped the battery man.

When you ship a battery for repair, be sure and give all the details possible. Always give the name and model of the car from which the battery has been taken.

If you ship your battery on account of a leaky cell, mark the cell which one is leaking. To illustrate the importance of this, we will relate a fact, which often happens. A battery is sent to a service station on account of a leaky jar. The leak could be so small as to develop only when the battery is subjected to the vibration of the car. That same battery may be left standing for a week or more, and it will never show a sign of leaking. Therefore the batteryman is at a loss to know which jar is leaking and after he has kept your battery that long, you insist upon getting it back. He has no alternative than to return it to you in the same condition as you sent it. You will naturally be disappointed, but you cannot blame him when he is said to choose between doing and replace a jar which is perhaps not leaking and causing you or not, which would cost you just one.

A Bureau Wainwright will receive this special article. Watch for this, cut out and save the whole thing to your own benefit.

THE REFERENDUM BALLOT INSTRUCTIONS

Some confusion seems to exist regarding the exact significance of the vote on the coming referendum. There seems to be uncertainty as to just what is involved in the question that is to be put to the people by the provincial government. In addition there may be an opportunity to study the question as it appears on the ballot, a copy of which will be used at the polls. The question is quite simple, and the same question in both parts of the ballot with the exception that the word "No" is written in one and "Yes" in the other.

Practically comes to this: Any person who marks his cross in the part of the ballot that is marked "No" he is voting with the negative that is "Shall importation of liquor in or intoxicating liquor into the province be forbidden."

If he make his mark on the part of the ballot where the word "Yes" is to be found he is voting with the answer which is "Shall importation of intoxicating liquor into the province be forbidden."

It is urged that during the month that will elapse before the electors register at the polls, that they will take pains to make sure that their vote represents their opinions.

Shall the importation or bringing of intoxicating liquor into the province be forbidden

CANADA'S NEW COAT-OF-ARMS & MOTTO "FROM SEA TO SEA"

Little has been said of the fact that the design for a new Canadian Coast of Arms is now in the College of Heralds in England and will shortly be issued. The new motto of the Dominion of Canada will be "From Sea to Sea" and is taken from Psalm 72: "He shall have dominion from sea to sea and from river to the ends of the earth." The well known London weekly, "Canada" recalls an interesting story in this connection by which it would appear that not only is the new motto of Canada to be taken from this verse but that the title "Dominion" also came from it. "It is said," says 'Canada,' "that when the great project of confederation was being considered, those engaged in the deliberations were much exercised in mind as to whether united Canada was to be called a 'Kingdom' a 'Commonwealth', or what other name.

"While they remained in this perplexity, one of the delegates, Sir Leonard Tilley, subsequently finance minister under Sir John A. Macdonald, and later on lieutenant governor of New Brunswick, came across the verse in the Psalms when reading his usual chapter from the Bible one morning in his room at the Hotel St. Louis. 'There' he said to himself, 'is the name for Canada—a "Dominion" which extends from sea to sea and from the river St. Lawrence to the ends of the earth.' When he brought his idea before his colleagues at their meeting in the old parliament house in Quebec the title at once appealed to all of them."

Things are "very nicely, thank you," at Terrace, B. C., but Mr and Mrs Fred Ackroyd are enjoying their holiday while back in town again. They are guests of Mrs R. Ackroyd.

TALES OF OUR OWN COUNTRY

SOME CHRONICLES OF THE DAYS OF THE WAR PARTY AND THE BUFFALO.—STORIES TOLD AROUND THE FIRES OF THE HUNTING CAMPS OF BYGONE DAYS

The R.N.W.M.P. In The Great North West

SETTLING THE NORTH WEST —THE CRIME BELT—THE BULLOCK TRAGEDY—WONDERFUL WORK OF THE POLICE—THE WEST MADE SAFE.

The early days of the twentieth century saw a large influx of new settlers to the northwest. One of the first regions to be extensively settled was the district which had been opened up by the construction of the Calgary and Edmonton roads which lay between the Bow River and the Saskatchewan. This was a rich and fertile territory and soon attracted a large emigration from the south. The first American settlers who came in were not of the class which a few years afterwards came from Iowa and the middle west to settle the Saskatchewan valley and also into the region in question. The country was still a frontier and attracted many wandering characters who were unfamiliar with British justice and British institutions. Many of these people believed that the same latitude would be allowed them to commit lawless offences as existed in the unorganized portions of the United States where frontier conditions still obtained. They soon, however, by means of the activities of the North West Mounted Police, learned their limitations, and the region became as law-abiding as any other portion of Canada.

The Crime Belt

During the time some of these newcomers were getting their education several affairs occurred which indicated the necessity of the strong hand of justice. It was this, perhaps that led the late Paddy Nolan to name the district "The Crime Belt."

The Bullock Family

There was a family named Bullock operating a small farm about midway between Calgary and Edmonton. They were fairly decent, hard-working people, and had come from one of the western states; their great grandfather had been the British general of that name and they rather prided themselves on their connection.

The Prodigal

There was a son in the family, however, who had been to a certain extent a wanderer and a vagabond and he had never been with his family in Canada. He flitted from construction camp to construction camp in the western states only working long enough to get enough money to enable him to engage in some dissipation. He had made friends with a workman and he had confided to him his desire to visit his parents' farm in Western Canada, but also said he didn't the money to undertake the journey. The friend, who was of a thrifty nature, had two or three hundred dollars stored away and he offered to bear the expenses of the journey. Accordingly the two young men arrived in Calgary and took the Calgary and Edmonton train for the nearest point to the farm. When they arrived there they set out to reach the place in the darkness, but only young Bullock arrived at his parents' home where he received every manifestation of welcome. He appeared to be in possession of money and told stories of how things had been prospering with him. He was quite generous with his funds and gave presents to all the members of his family. After a visit extending for some time he said his farewells and returned to the States.

A Dead Body

Shortly after his departure, some children, I think, who were looking for cows discovered in a slough the remains of a dead body. The R.N.W.M.P. investigated, a post mortem was held and there was little doubt that the dead man had met with foul play. A plain clothes member of the force was assigned to investigate; and slowly and carefully a chain of circumstantial evidence was built up. It was discovered that the dead man had been Bullock's companion and the evidence pointed to the fact that Bullock had killed him while on the way to the farm. A warrant was issued for the murderer, but he seemed to have disappeared from off the face of the earth. The district was exceedingly aroused over the crime and the order went forth that the murderer had to be captured.

Finding The Murderer

Accordingly a plain clothes member of the force went to the States and after a wide search succeeded in locating Bullock working in a railway construction camp, not far from Great Falls, Montana. With the assistance of the United States authorities he was arrested and extradicted and brought to Edmonton for trial. The trial disclosed that he was undoubtedly guilty and he was sentenced to death. He had killed his benefactor for a small sum of money. I think something under $300.00. He was apparently a congenital criminal and of a very bad type.

The Execution

There was rather a curious incident in connection with his execution. The regular hangman was indisposed or urgently engaged elsewhere and it was necessary to find someone else to officiate at the execution. The sheriff was in a quandry; the man had to be hanged and there was no one to do it. He was considerably relieved, however, on receiving an application for the job from a man named Binkley who lived in Ponopa. This man claimed that he had been an executioner in Ohio and that he had "worked off" over eighty criminals. Bullock was hanged in the North West Mounted Police yard at Fort Saskatchewan, one bitterly cold winter's morning. He appeared to be of an insensate type and entirely oblivious of the position. He ate an enormous breakfast and took full advantage of all the good things usually allowed to a condemned man. The scaffold had been erected in two compartments, in one of which was the trap and in the other a stone and some chairs. The compartment where there was a fire and where his spiritual adviser was endeavoring to arouse in him a sense of his condition. Punctually to the hour he was brought into the death compartment and then the executioner walked briskly on the scene. He was dressed in asmart suit, with a billycock hat and was smoking a cigar.

"Morning gents," he said, then he walked up to Bullock and said "stand here my man." Bullock shuffled over and stood on the trap. Binkley adjusted the noose in the cap. He laid down his cigar on a window ledge and turned to those present.

"Well gents," he said, "I guess I'm set now, and he clicked the lever with his foot. Bullock shot out of sight and Binkley picked up his cigar which was still alight and walked out.

Western Canada Made Safe

The work of the North West Mounted Police in connection with this case was beyond praise. They had only the most slender of clues to go upon. Investigations had to be carried on which covered not only the North West but a number of the adjacent States, but intelligence and patience was brought to bear and eventually justice was done. It was meting out justice of this nature which curbed lawlessness usual to the frontier, and made Western Canada one of the safest countries in which to live. The reproachful name of the "Crime Belt" has long become but a memory and there is no more peaceful and prosperous agricultural region in the whole continent

CHILDREN'S CORNER

The Children of Today Are the Parents and Citizens of Tomorrow. In Years to Come the Destinies of Canada Will Be in Their Hands.

903 McCallum Hill Bldg.,
Regina, Sask.

My Dear Boys and Girls:

This week I am printing my first letter from a boy. It seems that the girls have been much ahead of the boys regarding our competition, but as so far, we have only received one boy's letter I felt I must print it. Each week I shall print one letter from our readers, so when you write to me, you must watch carefully as some week you will see your own letter in print.

We are having beautiful fall weather just now and it is just the kind of weather for delightful outdoor games. I am sure you are all anxious to make the very most of these bright days knowing that the long winter will be with us before many weeks have passed. Not that the winter need have any real terrors for true prairie boys and girls, because there are some lovely days even in the winter, the beauty of which people who live in milder climates where they have more rain and slush cannot realize. What is finer than the lovely frosty atmosphere which prevails on a bright winter day when boys and girls can skate and slide and have all sorts of fun to bring the bright color into their faces and make them strong and healthy. I suppose you nearly all have sleighs and look forward to using them.

You will remember that I told you about my little nephew watching the children toboggan in the hole near his house last winter. Well, they have just commenced to build a house in that very hole, and although his mother is very glad that a house is being built there, yet I am sure a lot of children will miss the fun they had slipping up and down on their sleighs.

Hoping that I shall have more letters from you this week and with much love, I remain, as ever,

Yours affectionately,

AUNT BETTY.

Address your letters "Aunt Betty," 903 McCallum Hill Building, Regina, Sask.

September 5th, 1920.

Dear Aunt Betty:

I thought I would write to your interesting club.

I go to school. I am twelve years old and I am in grade four. We play squat-tag at school. I live on a farm. We are six miles from town and two miles from school. We have nineteen horses and two colts, and nine cattle and three cats and a dog. We have no car but I hope we will get one soon. I read the children's corner every week. Well, I hope to get a prize for my letter, so good-bye.

THE PLOVER

It was a beautiful June morning, and Uncle John was obliged to drive out to his farm.

"Would you like to come with me, Toddy?" he asked, as the horse was brought round to the door.

"Yes, sir!" Toddy answered, eagerly. "I just guess I would."

The sun was bright and the country road was green and sweet with delightful odors, and Toddy made believe in his mind he was a little colt he saw running round in the fields. Uncle John was driving along at a smart trot, then all of a sudden he stopped the horse quickly and cried out:

"Toddy, do you see that?"

And there, right under the pony's feet almost, were a whole family of little plovers.

Toddy was so delighted that he could not speak for a minute.

The tiny birds were just as quiet as could be, because their mother had taught them not to make a noise when any danger came near them. But they were dreadfully frightened, for, you see, they had been nearly run over.

"You may get out, Toddy, and run along the road for a piece," said Uncle John.

And then Toddy saw that the little plovers were not alone, but that their father and mother were with them. The minute Toddy's feet touched the ground, the old birds began to make a fuss. Possibly they thought he was a cruel, bad boy that was coming to steal their birdies.

The mother bird "cheeped," and all her little family followed her into the grass at the roadside; but the father bird ran along in front of Toddy, back and forth, and seemed to want the little boy to play with him.

Uncle John smiled.

"Try to catch him, Toddy," he said.

Toddy tried, but found it was not an easy thing to do. It was queer, too, for the plover dragged one wing along in the dust and seemed to be quite lame; but just as soon as the little boy would get near the bird and think he could put his hand on it, he would find it was a little ahead of him all the time.

He followed it along the road for three or four minutes. Uncle John driving slowly after him, till all of a sudden, when the father plover thought the mother bird had had time to get their wee family through the fence into the field, and to hide them safely in the long grass, he rose straight up into the air and away he flew back to them before Toddy had time to think.

"Wasn't it too bad to fool a little boy like that?" Uncle John said, as Teddy climbed back into the buggy. "You see, the father bird was only pretending he was lame, so you would think you could catch him. He knew the mother plover would be hiding the little ones. If you were to go back now, you couldn't find them anywhere."

"Oh," said Toddy, "but I wouldn't have hurt them! Why did they want to hide from me?"

"Well, you see," said Uncle John, "they didn't know you had an Aunt Hannah, who has taught you to be kind to every living thing."

"That's so," said Toddy, soberly, and he wondered if he would ever know as much as Uncle John did.

A FEW RAMBLING REMARKS BY A PRAIRIE WOMAN

A NEW HOME
(By Charlotte Becker.)

Here anything may happen: joy or grief
Cross swift the threshold of each paneled door,
Light steps or weary tap along each floor.
Here genius hold some eager souls in fief,
Or fame, capricious, come and go, as brief
As any laurels bloom. Here newborn life
May wake to know the great world's urge and strife;
Or love may teach some doubting heart belief.

No sorrow haunts these rooms so bright and bare,
Where one may deck the future as one will;
No ghastly, wistful voice drifts down the stair,
No memories grope at a window sill;
But here waits all that hope may yet define—
Ah, Fortune, let its peace make home a shrine!

Poor littl genius! Prodded and goaded and practised into a celebrity at an age when she should be gay and irresponsible and not know the meaning of the smiles or frowns of the public. Envious! Are you envious when you hear of some wonderful child who is holding audiences spellbound and drawing attention of professors at a time when she should be kept quietly at home. If she is a genius, more quietly than the average Tom or Mary who makes no pretence of being extraordinary? Does it make you envious and do you picture your own Tom or Mary in the same position and sigh because it is not so? Foolish, foolish! Rather be thankful that your children are normal and healthy, gifted with all their faculties and pity, pity with all your heart the much-lauded poor little genius.

Genius is a rare and delicate plant. It is a gift which should be reverenced with care. It does not need to be forced. There has been story after story of marvelous youthful prodigies who have flashed into publicity for a year or so and then have faded into obscurity or passed out. In most cases I believe that instead of being restrained these little ones have been pushed, pushed, with the result that they have broken down under the strain and the delicate nerves have never been able to respond again to the revelation of the genius within.

Perhaps you have a genius in your midst. Be gentle with him or with her. Guard carefully the years of training which should and must come between childhood and the time when the message will inevitably be given to the world. Have no fear, remember genius cannot be hidden forever, and the slower and quieter its development, the more beautiful and strong its fruition. You do not want it to bloom suddenly and fade away as unexpectedly. Remember, whatever may be said to the contrary, true genius must have lived and suffered; true genius must understand in its deeper sense the meaning of life. What child has, in the broader sense, lived and suffered? No child, therefore, can be a true genius. There have been many children hailed as such, however, when in reality they were merely youthful prodigies, in other words intensely precocious. Oftentimes, if the youthful prodigy were intelligently and carefully guarded instead of being continually forced, like a hothouse plant, he or she might develop into a genius to delight the world, although, of course, there is still a vast difference between a genius and a celebrity.

Common sense tells us that the nerves of children, unusually precocious must be more than ordinarily highly strung and sensitive and they do not need to be forced. They should not be allowed to practise, practise for long hours at an instrument; if their health is cared for, they have many years before them in which to practise. Rather should they be sent to romp in the fresh air with bright, young companions and allowed to forget their wonderful talent, the continual dwelling upon which only serves to make them conceited and priggish.

* * * *

The other day I read an interesting article called "Tracks" and it enumerated the different tracks which different individuals left behind them. The untidy person's tracks for instance, everything in a heap behind them; the mother's tracks, mended stockings and garments. The sharp-tongued person's tracks, she who never comes to pay a visit without leaving a worried frown on her hostess' face and pinpricks in her heart; the kindly person's tracks; she who, when she calls to visit the sick leaves a few flowers and some nice bright thoughts which have lightened the care on the sufferer's face, and last but not least, she who is in touch with Him who is the great Giver of every good and perfect gift; she leaves the tracks of peace and joy behind. I wonder what tracks you and I leave each day as we unconsciously go our different ways?

I have not had very many answers to my request for letters and I do hope that perhaps soon when the farm work is easing off that our readers will find more time to write to me. I should like to receive letters on any subjects which may interest you, and should there be anything particularly you would like to know, any particular recipes for instance, or answers to any special problem, I shall be glad to reply. Kindly address your letters to "Prairie Woman," 903 McCallum Hill Building, Regina.

Pages from the Diary of a War Wife

A TALE OF EVERYDAY PEOPLE AND THEIR HUMAN EXPERIENCES

SOME OF THE SORROWS WHICH THE WAR IMPOSED ON A WAITING WOMAN

Little Philip and I are on the train bound for the great West. Albert sent us a telegram just as soon as he located some rooms for us. From the letter which followed, I do not imagine that the rooms will be anything very brilliant, but it is best for us to get settled right away. I am no believer in a wife living in comfort at a great distance from the man she has promised to stand by "for richer for poorer" and I never could comprehend the viewpoint of those wives who will "summer" it in some happier clime while their husbands are standing the hardship and the freezing of a rigorous climate. Why marry a man at all if you cannot stand by him. We marry for "better or worse" and if the "worse" means living in some ungodly climate; then we should live in it, and if not prepared to do this, a woman should not marry. And so although I understand that the western climate is much sterner and harder than the eastern, yet I am gladly going to face it, because I want to help Albert and believe that if I steadfastly make up my mind, we shall accomplish what is so much to be envied in these days, a real home, and I do want to make a real "home" for little Philip to grow up in. Life seems to me a very purposeless thing if we do not try to make it worth while for some little one, and when that little one is your very own, there is an even more sacred responsibility.

As I gaze on the sleeping face of the little fellow, so unconscious of the tempest that has been passing through his mother's heart, I feel condemned in the presence of his innocence and pray that the God who guards over little children may keep me ever from any action which would humiliate me in his sight, and bring me from the pedestal whereon each little child will place his mother, if she will only let him. It is so easy to obtain reverence from little ones. Their unsullied hearts and minds are open and unsuspicious, they are looking so eagerly for perfection in the being whom they love; indeed they cannot see her faults. I said to Philip the other day, "You mustn't cry like a baby Philip; you know you are mother's little man now." He was silent for a while, and then as I went to tuck him up for the night I could see that that wonderful thought was still in his mind, as he looked up at me and said, "I'se 'our little man, isn't I?" and for several days after he would mention proudly to the other inmates of the house that he was "Muvver's little man."

We have reached the prairies and the scenery is very wonderful. But it is almost too vast to think about, or to form any concrete ideas upon. Just space, space, space, like eternity.

SECOND AVE. WAINWRIGHT

You can talk about the coal you've burned since coming to the West
Perhaps you think the kind you used undoubtedly the best,
But the kind I want to talk about is in a class alone,
When you've tried it you'll agree with me—there's none like
HUMBERSTONE

It's the kind that makes the housewife smile and keeps the cookstove red
It's the kind to bank the furnace with before you go to bed;
It's the kind that never clinkers and is free from slack and bone
It's the kind on which to stake your life, it's good old
HUMBERSTONE

A story I will tell you and it won't take long to tell:
By accident the folks one day ran short of coal in h,
So old Satan called up Number Ten and got us on the phone,
And said "Please send me 'P.D.Q.' a ton of
HUMBERSTONE

"The coal we're burning isn't good, it won't stay in all night;
"The thermometer, you know, should be one million Fahrenheit;
"But I'll make all these poor devils for their sinful ways atone,
"When I have got delivery of a ton of
HUMBERSTONE

Now before his majesty had put the receiver on the hook,
And just as we were entering the order in the book,
There came a rumbling o'er the wire—a dire and awful groan—
For the bunch heard Satan ordering a ton of
HUMBERSTONE

So, if you want the best there is, don't hold your order; When You get next to a telephone, just call up NUMBER TEN
And then say quick: "Now, look here Clute, I won't let you alone
"Until you've filled my cellar up with Good Old
